ORIGIN OF UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

It Was Born in the Quiet and Quiet Old Town of Washington.

Sunday's Chicago Tribune contains a very interesting article from the pen of Miss Mary Young Hogan of this city, giving an account of the visit of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe to this country, and the incidents that gave rise to her wonderful book, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The article is well illustrated, and after giving a sketch of several of the then aristocratic homes in and around Washington, with a brief outline of their occupants, Miss Hogan says:

"Upon a corner not far away stands a quaint old tavern whose windows are barred and whose door has been closed against the traveler. Here, many years ago, the cabins are tattered and torn, like the vast number of negroes who stand about the corners or who lounge on the steps and stretch out on the low creaking porches along the streets. There are old, decrepit negroes hobbling about on crutches; there are old mamies serenely smoking at the windows; there are smart wenches in bright head cloths, and there are pikaninnies here, there and everywhere. There seems to be nothing else until suddenly one passes a phanton in which are two pretty women who have come from that large brick house yonder, set down among its grotesque surroundings, a thing separate and apart from them all! Here is another brick, and there is still another. These are the residences of the few white families who still cling to the homes of their fathers. In those days, when there were giants in Washington, how bright and pretty all of these homes must have been, when the ivy was trimmed and the rose bushes pruned, when lights streamed from the windows and happy voices filled the rooms!"

"But what of that large brick house set down among grotesque surroundings? It stands to-day just as it did years ago, with the exception of the frame part—a small wing and porch. Here lived Marshall Key and here Henry Clay. As yet entertained Daniel Webster and Harriet Beecher Stowe. From this room Thomas Marshall Key went out, Chief of Staff of Gen. McClellan, and John James Key, Chief of Staff to Gen. Halleck, who took this same room 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' took form. Mrs. Stowe was a guest at Marshall Key's and there was to be a sale of negroes, that sale of which her immortal book makes the trader Haley reek."

"Executor's Sale.—Negroes!—Agreeably to order of court will be sold, Tuesday, Feb. 28, before the Courtroom door, in the Town of Washington, Ky., the following negroes: Hagar, aged 60; John; Albert, aged 15; Sold for the benefit of the creditors and heirs of the estate of Jesse Bluntford, Esq."

"Mrs. Stowe manifested a desire to witness this sale of negroes, and Col. Key had one of the boys in his office accompany her to the spot in front of the courtroom gate, where the auction was to take place. That day was Col. Benjamin P. Parry, Clerk of the Mason Court Circuit Court. He said Col. Key asked some of the other boys to escort Mrs. Stowe, but they would not go, and he was simply told that he must go. Col. Parry was a handsome young man, one of the gallants of that day, and with the tall, slender figure of Mrs. Stowe beside him, they must have been an imposing couple as they walked down a block to the Court-house."

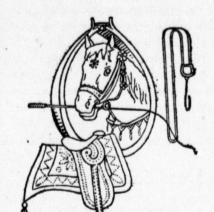

There before the gate was a motley crowd, the slaves, who were to be sold; a group of country gentlemen who were in town, standing quietly watching the proceedings; the traders, or 'slave drivers,' going in and out of the crowd, talking, laughing, bargaining, slapping their whips, and impatient for the sale. There was the burly figure of George Payton, the original of Legree; and here were the slaves, their bodies partly exposed for the inspection of the traders, while gathered in the group in the yard, round about the crowd, in the crowd, and everywhere were negroes, yellow and black, big and little, old and young.

"The tall woman, who stood with her hand upon the arm of a young man, a little apart from the crowd, she silently watched it all, clutching her companion's arm convulsively, as though receiving a nervous shock, whenever anything particularly repulsive in the sale occurred—and there 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' was born."

The members of the Mason Bar will request that the present term of the Mason Court Circuit be adjourned from this afternoon until Friday morning. This they do as complimentary to Judge A. E. Cole, who has ever been ready and willing to serve as a due regard for the business of his Court would permit, to accommodate the bar, individually and collectively. The attorneys and officers of the Court, learning that Judge Cole desired to attend the Annual Convocation of the Grand Commandery, K. T. of Columbia at Covington, determined to take the steps above indicated.

MAYSVILLE'S CHIEF INDUSTRIES.

The Keith-Schroeder Harness Company One of Our Successful Institutions.

A little over a year ago a company of gentlemen well-known in financial and business circles, organized an establishment which quickly ranks among the foremost of our industries. We refer to the Keith-Schroeder Harness Company, whose factory and salesrooms are situated at West Second Street.

The first floor of the building is occupied by the sample and salesrooms. The second and third floors are devoted exclusively to the manufacture of harness and saddles of every description,—in fact everything a well-bred horse could ask for in the way of wearing apparel. Sixteen skilled workmen are employed in the factory, and we are informed by Mr. J. R. Todd, the gentlemanly foreman of the second floor, that he could easily furnish work to as many more if he had the space. As it is the entire force has to work every night to keep up with the orders that are constantly pouring in from every part of the country—from New York, Michigan, Iowa, Georgia and even from far-off Texas. Their business has reached such proportions that the building they occupy must be enlarged or they will be compelled to seek more commodious quarters.

The success which has attended this business has been little short of phenomenal. The officers of the company, to whom much of the credit for the outcome of the venture is due, are the following enterprising citizens of this city: President, James W. Fitzgerald, proprietor of the Limestone Stock Farm; Secretary, Thomas A. Keith, Treasurer, George C. Keith; Superintendent, George Schroeder, all well known in Maysville and vicinity. In addition five traveling salesmen are on the road most of the time, and we would do injustice to the firm and to ourselves if we neglected to mention John C. Everett whose courtesy and geniality are known and appreciated by all.

THE PUBLIC LEDGER takes pleasure in encouraging anything that adds to Maysville's prosperity, and we only wish we had an abundance of institutions of all kinds equal to the Keith-Schroeder Harness Company.

THE PUBLIC LEDGER.

It will contain a couple of FAC-SIMILE documents that will be curiously interesting, and a large edition will be printed.

The Maysville correspondent of The Cincinnati Post isn't overly familiar with the way in which Uncle Sam does things. He is uneasy because the bondsmen of a defaulting Postmaster have not been called upon to make good the shortage; but he is sure that the Government are in force three years after a man goes out of office, and there's plenty of time yet. You may depend upon Uncle Sam getting there every time, however.

JAMES ROBERTS, who has been under indictment since last fall for participation in the murder of Edith Darby, last Fourth of July, had his trial at Caledonia Saturday and was acquitted.

One thinks Maysville isn't growing, just like it used to be a ride from one end of the street car line to the other. Yesterday afternoon THE LEDGER man counted no less than a dozen houses in course of construction.

The report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction for Carter county shows seventy-three school districts with an enrollment of 6,400 school children. The average attendance for the past year was 2,807. There were forty-three male and thirty-five female teachers employed.

THE MASON CIRCUIT COURT.

Gleanings From Late Yesterday's and Early To-day's Docket.

James Lashbrook vs. Kentucky Central Railway Company (mandate of Superior Court filed).

County of Mason vs. Cabin Creek and Springdale Turnpike-Road Company. This case consumed most of the day yesterday and was continued until this morning.

In the case of Lena Tolle vs. Thomas Cooper, for slander, the jury found for plaintiff and assessed the damages at $575. The suit was for $5,000. The verdict was returned about noon yesterday, the jury having been out since Saturday morning.

Pat Gantley, Wm. Gabby, James Lashbrook and Wm. Daugherty were reported as petit jurors.

PEOPLE'S BUILDING ASSOCIATION.

The First Annual Report of Secretary Baldwin is a Mighty Good One.

THE LEDGER is indebted to Robert L. Baldwin, the efficient Secretary, for an exhibit of the first year's business of the People's Building Association.

THE Courier-Journal says the colored population of Louisville engaged in a war of self-extinction Sunday. John Emmit Harris and Sam Dyer tried to settle a quarrel between female members of their families with the result that both men are thought to be fatally wounded, by a flying bullet and expected to die. Earlier in the day, a Smith and Ben Trent, disguised in the coat of an Irishman, shot a girl in the neck, who is now lying on the abdomen.

PLEADS GUILTY.

The Cashier of the Broken Painesville, O., Bank.

He Is Remanded to Jail to Await His Sentence.

An Affecting Meeting Between the Unhappy Man and His Wife and Daughter—The Women Cling to the Dejected Husband as Father Tenderly.

CLEVELAND, O., May 3.—Col. Ralph K. Paige, the cashier of the defunct bank of the Painesville Savings and Loan Association, pleaded guilty to uttering a forged money. Col. Paige is one of the best-known men in northern Ohio. He is a brother of Ex-Congressman David B. Paige, who is just now so badly wanted by banks holding notes of his firm bearing the forged indorsement of Millionaire John Huntington.

Col. Paige was, until his recent arrest, twenty years a trustee of the Cleveland bank. He was immediately after the collapse of the Painesville bank the cashier and President. Horace Steele was arrested on the charge of issuing forged notes. Steele is out on bail, and it is thought he did not know of the forgeries. Since Col. Paige was arrested he has been confined in the hospital in the county jail in this city. This morning he was taken into the criminal court, where he changed his plea of not guilty to guilty. It is indigent to one of guilty. Paige's wife and daughter were at court, accompanied by Judge Boynton and Captain Burroughs. When the court was announced in order, Bailiff Lancelotti was directed to go to the jail for Ralph K. Paige. The bad and sad news, in fact, that the time had come for him to either admit his crime or stand trial, appeared dazed.

"I dread it meeting my wife and daughter in court," he said.

"Do not give away like this, be a man," said Bailiff Lancelotti, consoling him.

Paige said no more, but as he was entering the courtroom he was met at the door by the wife and daughter. They were finally escorted to the bench by the bailiff and the two started to leave the courtroom. At the doorway, however, Paige was again intercepted by his wife and daughter.

"I understand that you desire to change your plea of not guilty to that of guilty," said the judge.

"I do," answered Paige.

"I will not sentence you to-day, as I desire to consider the case," replied the judge.

Paige did not answer. He hung his head for a moment as if expecting to hear the sentence pronounced. He was finally escorted to the bench by the bailiff and the two started to leave the courtroom. At the doorway, however, Paige was again intercepted by his wife and daughter.

He kissed them both, and was then conducted to the jail, where he was again locked up in a prison cell.

The meeting between Paige and his wife and daughter was decidedly affecting. The women clung to the disgraced man, and father and daughter, as if they were loth to part from him.

Paige pleaded guilty to one indictment. There are two others against him.

He was forger of a promissory note for $7,000, which bore the signature of the Importers and Traders National bank of New York. It was endorsed by the Painesville Savings and Loan Association, by Horace Steele, president, Steele also jointly implicated in the indictment. It was supposed that Paige would make some explanation or attempt to exonerate Steele, but he did not. He was, however, released when he is brought into court for sentence.

CUTTING REMARKS.

Henry Watterson frantically a Bad Boy. Two California men, who were in New York, May 3.—A Washington correspondent, in a story which he sends to his paper, affirms that a duel between Thos. J. Geary and Gen. Cutting, both congressmen from Kentucky, has been prevented by the offices of Hon. Henry Watterson, of Kentucky. A few nights ago, the story runs, Mr. Geary was seated at Chamberlain's in company with several New York congressmen and Col. Watterson. They were enjoying a midnight meal at the time, and Col. Watterson, of New York, was acting as host. Gen. Cutting, in a state of agitation, came into the room and asked over the table where he addressed Mr. Geary and his friends.

Gen. Cutting was not acquainted with any one in the party except Mr. Geary. Mr. Geary did not introduce him. This seemed to have annoyed him, and he said to have displayed a purpose to mingle with the party anyhow. Mr. Geary refused to enter into conversation with his colleague. Gen. Cutting is said first sneered at Mr. Geary's Chinese exclusion bill, and then, to the surprise of all, and finally to have applied to him a fustian. Then, white with anger, Mr. Geary is said to have risen, and grasping the neck of the man who sat at the table, he clung to it in his fist and with it gave Gen. Cutting a stunning blow on the face and sent him reeling down the hall. Mr. Geary then turned back, recovered himself, and cutting toward Gen. Geary and as he did so he threw his hand back of him.

This threw the party into a general state of excitement and everybody jumped to his feet. Col. Watterson rushed toward Cutting, while Mr. Geary put his hand into his coat pocket, and some one cried, "Don't shoot." But Geary was seized, and Cutting, it was said, gotten out of the room. Mr. Geary is said to have made adequate satisfaction, but, the story runs, Mr. Watterson bestirred himself and convincing Gen. Cutting that it is the duty of the grand jury to indict every one whom the evidence shows was a participant in said proceedings.

The commission consists of Brig-Gen. McCook, commanding the department of Arizona, and John Barstow, special disbursing agent. The expedition will consist of J. McClelland's troop of the Twenty-second cavalry and troop of Second cavalry. This latter is an Indian troop and will be used chiefly for courier duty. The expedition is expected to return to Ft. Wingate about June 25.

QUIET REIGNS.

The Better Element of the Colored People

Think the Grizzards Got What They Deserved.

And Declare There is No Danger of an Up-Rising-Here, the Lyncer, Dies His Wounded Judge, Hides Plainly to the Grand Jury.

NANVILLE, Tenn., May 3.—Charles Rear, one of the men wounded Saturday morning during the attack on the jail, died at 3:45 Monday. There is no excitement here now, and the feeling against Police Sergeant Davis is cooling off, as it is proven that Rear stated that he did not know who shot him. Davis is still at Brenwood, and Chief Clark says that a large number of his old friends have been ready to defend him in case he was attacked. Mr. Utley, chief of the grand jury at Nashville, called on Chief Clark Monday and asked that they be informed of any indications of an uprising of the colored people.

Numbers of prominent colored men have, however, declared to the police that there will be no trouble; that they think the Grizzards deserved all they got. The police were misinformed as to the movement of colored men toward Goodlettsville last night, but there were two hundred police ready to meet them if they had gone.

The criminal court met Monday, and concerning the lynching Judge Oliver charged the grand jury as follows: "Gentlemen, I wish to make brief reference to a recent occurrence in this county. I have seen from the public prints that within the last few days a mob broke open the jail and took therefrom a man who was being held for trial, and hanged him. Every man who was present in the mob, whether by lynching or the aiding or abetting is guilty, distinctively, of murder, and it is the duty of the grand jury to indict every one whom the evidence shows was a participant in said proceedings.

"I do not propose to preach you a sermon, but, under the law, every man who aided and abetted the affair is guilty of murder. It is a part of the unwritten law that a man who commits a crime shall be punished. It is not permitted to take the law in one's own hands. If it is, then there is no telling where it will end. If any man who engaged in this affair can be identified, it is your duty to indict him.

"I also understand that an attempt was made to break into the jail Saturday morning by a mob, who proposed to rescue a prisoner from the officers of the law. All who engaged in this affair are guilty of a crime. The penalty for this offense is imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than ten years.

"I have done my duty; now you can retire and do yours."

Ravachol Langhs.

PARIS, May 3.—Ravachol, the desperate anarchist and dynamiter, who was arrested and sentenced to imprisonment, has recovered from his recent fit of dejection, and now laughs at the way in which he was treated by the jury. He expects a verdict of extenuating circumstances in his case, and he is confident that he will be released, relying upon the effect of similar coercive tactics against the jury there.

RAVACHOL.

PARIS, May 3.—The man who caused the bomb explosion near the Guise barracks, in La Tour, on Sunday, and who was almost fatally injured by the explosion, is now known as a pious man and a royalist, and nobody would have suspected him of making use of bombs.

Stern Justice for Jokers.

MEXICO CITY, May 3.—A week ago, while Charles McGinnis and Leslie Coe were intoxicated, they badly scared a young boy and took a danger signal from him. He returned it in the form of a handkerchief, which was lost. The boy's father prosecuted the young men on the charge of stealing the handkerchief, and Monday evening they were sentenced to the penitentiary for two years.
